U.S. Foreign Policy Failures – Alternative Insight I noted this in my book and articles more than once. And see also my remark above about some UN Security Council members that they were “committed” and “would go for it” to implement UNSC 2254. The United Nations only intervenes militarily if it is authorized to do so by the Security Council, and in the case of Syria it was not.

Bella De Soto's Web Site 12/18/05 - bellads.info The International Council on Security and Development claimed the Taliban insurgents had established a "permanent presence" in roughly three-quarters of the country. This claim might have led Lt.-Gen. Michel Gauthier, commander of the Canadian mission, to state: "The coming year will bring more violence in Afghanistan than in 2008."
